Careers Event at St Mary's

Inspiring the next generation

Social Value Case Study

At Danaher & Walsh, supporting the next generation of construction professionals is at the heart of what we do. This is why we attend different careers events to help inspire the next generation who want to know more about construction and civil engineering.

Mason and Jo attended a careers event at St Mary's. They both had such a great day with the students doing mock interviews, which gave the students critical skills they can apply in their future.

Inspiring the Next Generation

Both Jo and Mason did mock Interviews for year 10 students. At Danaher & Walsh, we were overall very impressed with the students. In total, we interviewed nine overall (there were 15 other people doing interviews, so as a business, we got through circa 140 students altogether).

Jo had met some of the other interviewers who were local businesses in the community, and had a chat with them, which was very interesting.

Overall, Jo commented, 'I am very impressed with the students and how they presented themselves in the interviews, as well as how professional they came across. I hope we gave them some useful tips that they can apply to future interviews.'
